What these figures show: with 29% fewer impressions, the campaign generated 46% more clicks and doubled its CTR: delivery is now focused on shoppers who are genuinely looking for denim and Levi's pieces.

Measuring sales: sales are currently tracked through Rakuten links. Installing the Lemrock Conversion Tracker is essential to measure the campaign's real ROI and optimise delivery on conversions, not just clicks.

OBJECTIVE To be defined

QUALITATIVE INSIGHTS

01 Vintage and heritage pieces drive clicks

The Vintage Red Tab T-shirt reaches 1.84 times the average CTR, the Trucker jacket 1.38 times and the Vintage Boxy sweatshirt 1.31 times. Shoppers come to Levi's for its heritage: it is the brand's strongest differentiator.

→ We will increase the share of vintage and heritage pieces in delivery.

02 Jeans remain the core of the campaign

Men's jeans reach 1.13 times the average and women's jeans 1.05 times; the XL Straight jean reaches 1.28 times. Relaxed and straight fits match what shoppers ask AI assistants about.

→ We will focus jeans ads on relaxed and straight fits.

03 Accessories work best as a complement

Belts, beanies and caps stay at 0.49 times the average when shown on their own. Accessories are bought alongside a main piece, not as a first purchase.

→ We will reduce standalone accessory ads and show them as a complement to jeans.

04 Outerwear is the next growth lever

Jackets and sweats reach 1.24 times the average, skirts and dresses 1.20 times. With the cold season starting, outerwear is the category with the most potential.

→ We will push outerwear (Trucker, sherpa, sweats) through October and November.
